Nestlé's ambitious lawsuit

The company builds a health firm - where this is seen, it is still open

From Dieter Bachmann, Veyev

Luis Cantarell, winner of the Schuler-Preis, even more Nestlé, now in the USA, in the middle of the business world of the health care sector. If he wants to make his own business, he still doesn't have a job as head of the American zone. The company wants to build a new health firm, which he could take over.

The company wants to build a new health firm, which he could take over.

In the meantime, he has already made some progress. The company has already bought several start-ups, which are now being integrated into the existing business. The company is also working on developing new products, which will be launched in the near future.

The company's main focus is on developing new products, which will be launched in the near future.

The company's main focus is on developing new products, which will be launched in the near future.

End of the text.